The speech was as follows: President Cleveland's Speech.

I have anticipated the share assigned to me on this occasion with considerable trepidation, for various reasons. I have been chiefly disturbed, I believe, because of my inability to discover sufficient ground for my right to join those who celebrate the semi-centennial of a medical association. ARRIVAL OF PRESIDENT CLEVELAND AT THE JERSEY CITY DEPOT. President Cleveland, accompanied by Secretary of War Daniel S. Lamont and Surgeon-General Sternberg, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon to attend the semi-centennial celebration of the New York Academy of Medicine The Presidential party came on the Pennsylvania Railroad. They reached the Jersey City depot at 4:40 o'clock. Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, of No. 54 West Thirty-sixth street, the President's medical adviser, was present to greet him, as was also ex-Assemblyman James Oliver, sergeant-at-arms of the Democratic National Committee.

Dr. Bryant was the first to shake hands with Mr. Cleveland as he stepped from the train, Mr. Oliver was close behind him, however, and, removing his hat, said:

"I am glad to see you, Mr. President." 'And I am glad to see you, Jimmy," was the reply.

Accompanied by his friends, the President walked to a carriage, which was in waiting, and crossed over to New York on the Desbrosses street ferry. He was then driven to Dr. Bryant's house. He wore a black suit, black overcoat and silk hat. His clothes were stained by travel and he had a worried look on his face.
